Subject: Re: Request for Final Review and Suggestions on Draft Syllabus – Political Science &amp; Defense and Strategic Studies

===== Forwarded message =====

Dear Prof. Pandey,

Thanks, I received your email. There are a few observations on the Syllabus of Political Science:

- SEC on Leadership in Democracy is designed in a way which appears to be more theoretical than skill-oriented. Further, the title of the course is Leadership in Democracy, therefore, the students who will opt for this course on the basis of the title of the course and stated outcomes would have the expectation to learn something about patterns of leadership in democracy and democratic leadership skills. But the course content includes only the concept of democracy and democratic institutions and there is no unit on leadership in the course, so there would be a gap in the expectations of the learners and the actual outcome of the course.

- Suggested Readings Section needs careful reading as there are some typos that should be rectified like जान सिंह सिंधु in place of ज्ञान सिंह सिंधु, विल किमतिका in place of विल किमलिका etc.

Suggested readings section also needs a little pruning. In a few courses, some books are suggested that do not match with the course content like Course:DSE2 Foundations of Indian Political Thought- In the content there is no Unit on Gandhi but in the Suggested readings many books on Gandhi are suggested like Iyer, R. (Ed.). (1997). The collected works of Mahatma Gandhi (Vols. 1–100). Iyer, R. (1973). The moral and political thought of Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi, M. K. (1909). Hind Swaraj or Indian home rule. Similarly, in the suggested readings for the Course Code: GE 3 Modern Indian Political Thought, there are a number of books on Ancient Indian Political Thought. This has made the suggested reading sections quite repetitive.

Dear Sir/Madam,

Greetings!

The Department of Higher Education extends its sincere gratitude for your valuable inputs and ongoing support in aligning the curriculum with the National Education Policy (NEP) mandate. Our aim is to develop a curriculum that not only reinforces academic foundations but also equips students to face real-world challenges in governance, public policy, national security, and strategic affairs—while ensuring they are prepared for future market demands.

We are pleased to share the Final Draft Syllabus for Political Science and Defense & Strategic Studies, as submitted by the Subject Conveners of the University. This revised syllabus offers a comprehensive understanding of political theory, international relations, defence strategies, and contemporary global and national security concerns. It also integrates skill-based components relevant to career paths in civil services, think tanks, public policy, international organizations, defence analysis, and strategic research.

Incorporating interdisciplinary learning and practical skill development, the curriculum is designed to enhance employability and prepare students for dynamic roles in both public and private sectors.

Before we proceed with finalization, we kindly request your expert review, comments, and suggestions—if possible—by 20th May.

Your insights will be instrumental in shaping a curriculum that is academically rigorous, professionally relevant, and future-ready.

We deeply value your expertise and look forward to your continued collaboration.

Dear Deepak Ji

Read the papers of Political Science,SEC,VAC, etc.

I had long discussion with Kalpana Ji over phone before 6th May. I had suggested her modifications in many papers which have been incorporated.

In many papers, however, problems remain, both in contents of the syllabus and In Suggested Reading Lists:

For Example, Authors and their Books who have been critical of, and who mock Indian civilization,RSS,Jan Sangh, BJP and Modi are referred in the syllabus . This defeats the objective of the NEP and of the decolonization process.

Their concepts and themes such for example as Patriarchy,Feminism,etc., which are Western concepts are being referred here.

There are other multiple issues which I do not approve of . I will prefer to disassociate my self . And this is for record.

Sincerely
Himanshu Roy
